charles Hamilton Schultz 2d. the extraordinarily capable producer of the University Players, the man behind-the-scenes and in-the-boxoffice, who has been largely responsible for the successes achieved by the Players over the course of two summer seasons. A year ago the 22-year oid Schultz—a member of Princeton University's Class of 1954 and the youngest producer on the so-called strawhat-and-citronella circuit—revived the University Players, emphasized that they would be concerned with things infinitely more rewarding than the customary fare of summer stock companies and then proceeded to prove that a talented and dedicated young company can more than hold its own when it comes to presenting "good theatre"

comes to presenting "good theatre."

This week, with Shakespear's "Twelfth Night" closing out a "balanced summer of dramatic productions," he and his associates once more conjured up memories of the original University Players, the group which was brought into being on Cape Cod in 1928 and became a springboard for Jimmy Stewart. Henry Fonda, Margaret Sullavan and others. While comparisons between past and present are dangerous, the 1954 Players approached their undertakings with the same contaginus enthusiasm of their forebears. For instance, Schultz frequently put in a 17-hour day, the cast cheerfully worked until 4:00 a. m on "strike night" and the Junior University Players, composed of 'teen-age Princetonians, thought little of cutting by hand the 473 stars required for the "Twelfth Night" set.

From the beginning Schultz, a native of Johnstown. Pa., and the son of the first woman to land a reporter's job on The Cleveland Press, has been living and breathing "the theater." His first dramatic experience, a part in a fifth-grade operetta entitled "Down on the Farm", was followed by the directorship of a childhood cellar playhouse, the Nickelodeon, that milked coins from his parents and indulgent neighbors. Year by year, as he advanced from Southmont High School, to Culver Academy summer sessions, a post-graduate year at Phillips Exeter Academy and finally to Princeton, he did everything within his power to broaden his understanding of "show business" and devoted his Princeton thesis to "Working Toward a Definition of Modern Tragedy."

An officer of the Princeton Triangle Club and the Theater Intime, he took his first dier in summer stock at 16, appearing at the Mountain Playhouse, Jennerstown, Pa. In 1952 he was runner-up in a nationwide "dramatic talent search" sponsored by the Philip Morris Radio Playhouse, a distinction which finally permitted him to kiss cinemactress Arlene Dahl. Schultz at one point in his "summer career" specialized in roles in Norman Krasna's "John-Loves Mary." It was in this comedy classic that he encountered such production difficulties as playing to a house of 16 (in a converted roller-rink capable of a commodating 3,200) and competing with the appeals of a honky-tonk midway in a carnival part in Altona. Pa.

For demonstrating beyond doubt that there is a deep and abiding appreciation for "good plays well done"; for giving hundreds of Princetonians good reason to remember the "summer season of '54"; for helping others approach, and possibly surpass, the records made by their predecessors—the University Players of yesteryear; the is TOWN TOPICS' nominee for Ordinance Postponed, As expected, the Borough Council at its Tuesday meeting passed on first reading an ordinance calling for a ization of the municipal incinera-tor and sewage disposal plant.

A second ordinance calling for capital expenditures of up to $250,000 for other improvements in the Borough was not intro-duced, however.

A number of questions on the "improvements ordinance," previ-"improvements ordinance," previously recommended by the Borough Planning Board, could not be settled in time for the meeting, according to Tristam B. Johnson, Council President and Chairman of the Finance Committee.

Mayor P. MacKay Sturges and members of the Council stressed that the early introduction of hoth ordinances had been sought in order to clarify the Borough's Education, which can now go ahead with hearing in Trenton on its proposed $1,770,000 expansion of Princeton High School.

The Board of Education has a meeting scheduled for next Tuesday and is now likely to consider setting a date for a special election on the school bond issue.

Mr. Johnson indicated that since the "improvements ordinance" was not readied for Tuesday's council meeting, it will not be a factor in the Board of Education's planning, and that there is no need for immediate consideration of the ordinance by the council.

New Agreement Needed, Although the incinerator and sow-age plant ordinance has been under study for some time, Alay or Sturges said that it will not be passed in final form until a sup-plemental agreement on the bond issue is reached with the Town-ship and the University.

The incinerator and sewage plant is operated jointly under an agreement drawn in 1932 by the three parties concerned. The joint sewage cootrol committee originally recommended improvement of the plant, however, and the problems of reaching a new agreement are unlikely to cause much, if any, delay in that passage of the ordinance.

The act culls for expenditure of $134,925 on the incinerator plant, which is now greatly overhurdened, and of $69,825 on the sewage plant, to meet the needs of Princeton's growing population. Between 60, and 70 per cent of the total cost will go towards modernization of the equipment and the remainder for expansion.

Possible Contenders. With an expanded Township Committee of five members apparently about to become a reality as of November, it was reported this week that instructions have been mailed to county committee members of both parties on the manner of choosing their two additional candidates

The possibility of contests for three scats on the committee has launched considerable speculation on the probable nominees. John J. McCarthy Jr. for the Democrats and Ralph S. Mason for the Republicans are already on the ballot for the seat now held by Mayor Albert Salzman.

MURRAY THEATRE

A pleasing production of Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" will continue through Saturday night at Murray Theatre on the University Campus, bringing to a close a highly successful season for the University Players. A recap of the eight-week season and news of the products for

A recap of the eight-week season and news of the prospects for another summer of the Players here in 1955 will appear next week.

"Twelfth Night" was the last of Shakespeare's, "golden comedies." "The rain it rainth everyday," and still to come were the dark tragedies and the final great romances. But in this comedy Shakespeare showed maximum command of his poetic powers, and he was writing about love. So "Twelfth Night" can sustain a youthful production of the kind

So "Twelfth Night" can sustain a youthful production of the kind the University Players have given it. In place of polished elocution and acting, they have spirit and the fine directorial touches provided by John Wilders.

and acting, they have spirit and the fine directorial touches provided by John Wilders.

Instead of "big production values," they have a lively pace, a most workable single set and gorgeous costuming. Besides, the comedy is subtitled "or, What You Will," so that any means of evoking the play's charming atmosphere will do.

A number of scenes, speeches and bits were unsuccessful on Monday, but by and large, the production was able to cover them up.

George Petrarca (who played Dake Orsino) spoke Shaket-peare's lines exceptionally well, and the nimble tongued and footed Feste, the clown, was skillfully handled by Mario Siletti.

One might have asked for a

One might have asked for a better reading in the love scenes from the leading ladies, but Pat Crawford was an appealing Viola and Lelia Barry convincing as romantic and sentimental Olivia.

"Twelfth Night" is something over 350 years old and yet the audience still found it full of much laughter. The actors of the sub-plot had their ups and downs, yet they were largely responsible for much of the fun.

yet they were largely responsible for much of the fun.
Francis Schmertz played the Falstaffian Sir Tohy Belch and Thomas Rimer the "out-to-lunch" fop, Sir Andrew Aguecheek, Philip Minor kept the part of Malvolio consistently on the light side, but it seemed to work out. Helen Fox as Maria and Charles Robinson as Fabian assisted in the

Since "Twelfth Night" represents the culmination of Shakespeare's work in the romantic comedy vein, the movement of the play is swift and sure, and the joining of the two plots deft. However, Mr. Wilders' direction was clearly a help in moving the scenes across the small Murray stage at such a pleasing pace.

Saturday evening at the Bucks County Playhouse in New Hope.
The next tenant at the barn theatre will be "The Champagne Complex," a new comedy by Leslie Stevens, whose "Bullfight" was an off-Broadway hit this past season. Breamse of schedule season. Because of schedule changes (see below) the comedy opens Monday for a run of two weeks, instead of one.

Patricia Smith, Frank Albert-son and Elliott Reid will be co-starred in the premiere of "Champagne Complex." The character comedy is scheduled to open in New York on October 26.

The play chronicles a rollercoaster romance between a vivacoaster formine between a victor cious young magazine writer (Miss Smith) and her ambitious publisher (Mr. Albertson). The young authoress goes un an unexpected champagne binge, which calls for the psychiatric services of Mr. Reid.

Jerome Cowan, resident star at the Playbouse, has been released from his contract by producer Michael Ellis to take on a starring role in the national road com-pany of "The Moon Is Blue." He will depart after this week's show closes to assume the role he played when the comedy opened the Bucks season this summer.

Calder Willingham's new com-edy, "The Automobile Man," which drew generally unfavorable reviews, set a new record at the Bucks Playhouse for high gross on a one-week show. The figure was $7,251.

The second weeks of "The Cocktail Party" and "Aboard the Bandwagon" turned in slightly bigger grosses—chiefly because of the absence of complimentary scats. The average gross for the first 10 weeks this season of the new Hope barn theatre is a record (and amazing) $6,967.

VACATION SUGGESTION
from Princeton Small Animal Rescue League, Don't ever leave a cat to lend for himself while you go off on your vacation.
Contrary to some opinion, a cat cannot find adequate food and water on his own, particularly if be has become dependent on you.
